Introduction

Introduction

In the face of the COVID-19 pandemic, abusive partner intervention program (APIP) providers across the country have adapted their services to help promote healing and foster accountability during these unprecedented times.

In partnership with James Henderson from Accountable Choices and David Garvin from the Battering Intervention Services Coalition of Michigan, the Center for Court Innovation surveyed over two dozen abusive partner intervention programs nationwide in order to develop this guide outlining a handful of programs with remote- and culturally-responsive services to better support their communities during the COVID-19 pandemic and long after it's concluded.

This list is representative of only a snapshot of programs nationwide. If your program is unrepresented and you would like it included, please contact the Center for Court Innovation at:
